TALKING POLITICS.

McKinley in Speech Making in Iowa and Hill in New York.

GERMAN CATHOLICS RESOLUTION

They Emphatically Favor the Restoration of the Pope's Temporal Power—Hill Denounces the McKinley Bill Which He Author Defends.

CHICAGO, Ill., Sept. 23.—There was the greatest outpouring to greet McKinley at the coal palace today since Grant's last visit to the city. Twenty-five crowded excursion trains from all parts of Iowa arrived, supplemented by regular trains and all crowded to the utmost. Fully 50,000 people were in the streets during the monster procession and the entire marching body to the number of thousands, carried corn-stalk canes and wore American tinplate Ohio badges. McKinley was everywhere wildly cheered and the coal palace, capable of seating 8000 people, was not large enough to accommodate the crowds.

This afternoon Major McKinley spoke two hours on tariff and silver. He was continuously applauded. He was followed by Allison, Henderson and Lacey.

Governor Hill Speech Making.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y., Sept. 23.—Governor Hill made two speeches in this city today. He arrived with his private secretary and Colonel McEwen at 1:40 p. m. and was driven to the grounds of the Dutchess County Agricultural society, where he delivered an address before 30,000 people.

The address was rendered a reception at the residence of Chief Justice Barnard of the supreme court, which was attended by about 200 of the city's leading politicians and professional men, and was the most brilliant social event Poughkeepsie has known for a long time. Then the governor was driven to the Dutchess club where he was serenaded by the Twenty-first regiment band.

At 7:30 he mounted an improvised platform in front of the club house and spoke to the large crowd which had gathered. He said in opening that he would not open the campaign [illegible] nelly intended, but styled his remarks a "political shot or two."

He said: "The Democratic party enters the campaign with feelings of confidence in the result. New York is a Democratic state, let me call your attention that in state issues the party has lost the state but once in nine or ten years. The Democratic party has no cause to set. We started where we were in 1884 and 1888. In 1888 we set the flag of tariff reform upon our shoulders, and there we shall carry it on to victory. If the Republicans are tired of the issues, they can abandon it, we shall carry it to the end."

The speaker denounced the McKinley bill, which he said was framed to take money from the people and to aid monopolies, and while it has not ruined the colonies, has not benefitted it. "It has not raised wages and the country is made to suffer from overtaxation under this very law. The Democratic party believes the place of the surplus is to be in the pocket of the people not in the government treasury. [Cheers.]

"The Republicans said a year ago that we could not secure control of the legislature, the result was a Democratic legislature on a joint ballot, which gave the lowest tax levy in thirty-six years and gave also the shortest legislative session in seventeen years."

The governor condemned the Republican senate for not passing the bill to redistrict [illegible] and the Republican platform on high license "oblivion and a snare." While the platform declared for local option, both houses of the legislature failed two years ago to pass the bill in accordance with their platform. The Democrats believe that all revenues, whether called taxes or excise fees, should go into the locality where collected and not go the state to be distributed among counties having no licenses.

The names of Flower and Sheehan were enthusiastically applauded when mentioned by the governor. At the conclusion of his speech Governor Hill left for Albany.

German Catholics Resolutions.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 23.—The platform adopted at the German Catholic congress tonight declares that the German American congress embraces the opportunity of pointing out publicly and distinctly its position in the so-called Roman question, namely, the temporal power of the pope. As loyal American citizens we will not tolerate any interference with the free exercise of our rights on this extremely important church matter. The entirely free exercise of the highest apostolic power, according to God's ordinance, is intimately connected as well with the spiritual with the entire church as with the territorial independence of the holy see, willed by divine providence. It is a necessary means in our present political and social situation to secure and maintain that freedom in its full meaning of the word. Rome as the natural seat of the papacy, as the center of the church, as the metropolis of the Catholic world, belongs to the pope. We will never cease to courageously support our holy father and to strive with all legal and legitimate means to remain the faithful children of St. Peter.

We believe the time has come when an international congress can convene for the purpose of aiding in the restoration of the pope's temporal power. We believe that no country in the world is better adapted for holding such a congress than the United States and that no time is more opportune than the occasion of the World's Fair in Chicago. This, our cherished wish, we respectfully submit for the consideration and approval of all our brethren in the Catholic faith, to the good will and approval of our efficient bishop, especially of his eminence our beloved cardinal, James Gibbons, of Baltimore, and lastly with filial reverence and love to the decision of our supreme pontiff, Leo XIII.

We demand the full right and liberty to retain without interference from any one our German mother tongue together with the language of the country. At the same time we protest most emphatically that for this reason the cry of foreigners is raised against us and that an attempt is made to deny us our legal rights with other American citizens.

We protest against all attempts to encroach upon all the rights of the Indians in the selection and practice of their religion. We protest in the name of liberty and justice against the attempts that are made to withdraw from the Indian schools the support of the government under the hypocritical plea of [illegible] the public schools.

Nebraska Republicans.

LINCOLN, Neb., Sept. 23.—The Republican state convention will meet in this city to-morrow for the purpose of nominating a supreme judge and two regents of the state university. There are 348 delegates and owing to the bitter feeling growing out of the defeat of Judge Reese for renomination in 1889, a long and bitter struggle is expected in the convention.

Trinidad's Fire Department Disbands.

TRINIDAD, Colo., Sept. 23.—To-night the members of the Trinidad fire department are having a big demonstration which will last until midnight, when the apparatus will be turned over to the city and the various companies disbanded. This leaves the city with no protection against fire. The action of the firemen is due to the fact that the city council refused to compensate them for time lost in all fires. Heated by the night, playing a game the four companies [illegible] through the principal streets, the hose carts draped in mourning. At the head of the procession was a transparency representing a coffin.

The citizens are in sympathy with the members of the department, who have been very shabbily treated. The only recourse for the city now is to organize a paid department.

Relief for Flood Sufferers.

MADRID, Sept. 23.—The queen regent has received a letter from the kaiser, expressing his sorrow for the destruction wrought by the recent floods, and offering a large donation for the benefit of the sufferers. The king has [illegible] 5000 pesetas.

It is said, that under the first terrible impressions, the number of victims of the catastrophe was exaggerated. There was great difficulty in verifying the accounts.

Worcester Musical Festival.

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 23.—The orchestra played superbly at this afternoon's concert, and Mrs. Julia L. Wyman and Mrs. Seabury C. Ford gave great satisfaction. The evening Miss. Lillian Nordica carried the house by storm in "Amenaide." Mme. Carl Alves also made a hit in Rubenstein's "Hagar in the Desert." Dr. Bridge's "Repentance of Nineveh," was given for the first time in America and was well received.

A Change of Creed.

CANTON, Ohio, Sept. 23.—Rev. Howard MacQuadry, the suspended Episcopal clergyman, today forwarded a letter to Bishop Leonard of Cleveland, announcing his withdrawal from the Episcopal ministry.

He states as his reason that he cannot conscientiously retract the statements made. He has accepted a call as pastor of the First Universalist church at Saginaw, Mich., and will begin his work there a week from next Sunday.

A Fireman Lost.

PUEBLO, Sept. 23.—A special to The Republican from Canon City says: A. P. Bass, a fireman on the Denver and Rio Grande railroad, while going through the cannon about 8 o'clock last night, fell from his engine and disappeared. Search failed to throw any light on his whereabouts and it is supposed he fell into the Arkansas river and was drowned.

Congressman Scott's Funeral.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Sept. 23.—Governor Pattison today received a telegram announcing that the funeral of the Hon. William [illegible] will take place at 4 o'clock at Erie, Pa. Governor Pattison will attend the funeral in company with other officials.

The department is prepared to order and to enforce a decided stand in the matter.

THE NEWS OF A DAY.

Fires A Fire Doing Much Damage in Michigan.

ANOTHER RIOT IN CHINA.

Houses and Property of American Missionaries Destroyed, but no Lives Lost—Details of that Whole Bad Business.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 23.—The forest and prairie fires continue to rage in Minnesota and North Dakota, and the reports this morning are of the most alarming character. From Pine City, Minn., comes the report that the fires are raging in northwestern Minnesota, over a million worth of timber having been destroyed. Several homes and farm buildings have been burned and the owners obliged to leave the devastated district.

Two school houses were destroyed yesterday, the pupils barely escaping with their lives. The fire is approaching Pine City and 500 men are fighting it. All along the line of the St. Paul and Duluth road fires are raging and incoming passengers say great damage has been done at Barnum, Mahtowa, Sturgeon Lake and Kettle River.

In the standing timber near the railway, on the line of the Eastern Minnesota, north of Hinckley, considerable valuable timber has been ruined, and fires are still raging on the North Pacific. East toward Ashland fires are doing immense damage to settlers and crops, besides wiping out quantities of standing pine. At Hinckley the entire male population was fighting the fire all night, and to-day the danger of the destruction of the town has been averted.

Terrific fires that have been so terribly destructive around Hinckley the past few days are extinguished.

Rioting in China.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 23.—The steamer Empress of China has arrived at Vancouver, B. C., with the news that J. A. Leonard, United States consul general at Shanghai, telegraphed Admiral Belknap on Sept. 3 as follows:

A Shanghai morning paper has a telegram received last night of a riot at Tschang at noon Sept. 2. The mission and all foreign property was burned. No lives lost."

Admiral Belknap immediately sent the Alliance and the Palos to Tschang. Another riot occurred at Tsching on Sept. 3. All the foreign property at the port was burned, but no lives were lost. The foreign residents were under arms at the latest accounts.

The White Oaks Railway.

EL PASO, Tex., Sept. 23.—The railroad convention which has been in session here for three days, today adopted a report to the effect that the convention confine its labors exclusively to the building a railway from El Paso, Tex., via White Oaks, Las Vegas, N. M., Trinidad and Pueblo, Colo., to a northern terminus at the city of Denver, with the understanding that this line shall be a road separate and distinct from present railway organization and that as a preliminary to the work of interesting capital in the construction of this line of railway, it was deemed that a survey of the proposed route from White Oaks to Trinidad should be made immediately and that in view of the fact that the city of El Paso is prepared to furnish a complete survey and elaborate data of the route from El Paso to White Oaks, the city is therefore exempted from this [illegible] the [illegible] and from White Oaks to Trinidad.

The cost of the said survey from El Paso to White Oaks to be borne by the cities of Denver, Trinidad, Las Vegas, the Maxwell grant and White Oaks. The cities mentioned are assessed for their part of the expenses.

The resolution continues: And we most cordially invite the city of Pueblo through the delegation it named to this convention and which failed to come here, to unite with us in the work of carrying this undertaking to success. We assess an assessment upon the cities for this survey, which is estimated at $10,000, as follows: Denver, $2,000; Pueblo, $1,500; Trinidad, $2,000; Las Vegas, $1,500; Maxwell Grant, $1,500; White Oaks, $1,500. Total, $10,000.

It is also recommended that an adequate corps of engineers be put in the field to complete the preliminary survey from White Oaks to Trinidad within the time of ninety days from the first day of October.

Ringing resolutions were passed pledging interested cities to the construction of the road. At 10 o'clock the convention adjourned subject to call of the executive committee, which will be named by different delegations Friday.

Polygamy Disappearing.

CHICAGO, Sept. 23.—Ex-United States Senator Alvin Saunders of Nebraska is in the city attending the annual meeting of the National Utah Commission. This year's session of the Utah Commission will be of particular interest to those who have studied the Mormon problem.

Said Senator Saunders, "The members of the commission have just returned from a two months' investigation in Utah and we shall be glad to be able to note in our report to the president that polygamy is gradually dying out in the territory. I will not say that the law has been completely successful in stamping out polygamous practices but it has done far more in that direction than any of us expected could be done when the law was enacted. The Mormons are beginning to recognize that instead of waging war with the Gentiles of Utah alone, in support of their doubtful religious tenets, they have on their hands an unusual fight against the opinions of 65,000,000 people in the United States."

Government Gun Tests.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—The navy department recently made a test for rapidity of firing with a Dashiel 4-inch rapid fire gun at the government proving ground at Indian Head, Md. A service charge of brown powder was used. The gun was fired in salvos of five rounds each, the first being delivered in twenty-six seconds, the second in twenty-two seconds and the third in seventeen seconds. This rapidity of fire is unprecedented.

The first of the 10-inch guns for the gunboat Monterey fitted with the Dashiel system of breech mechanism and the first mount for this caliber, which was designated by the bureau of ordnance and which is to be installed on board that vessel were, also tested at the Indian Head proving grounds. The performance of both systems, which differ materially from those adopted for the Miantonomoh, was extremely satisfactory, and with slight alteration the gun and mount will be considered as ready for issue to the service.

The Excitement Subsiding.

GUTHRIE, Sept. 23.—The excitement here is subsiding. In front of the land office there is a very large crowd waiting to file on the lands. Fully 500 people were in line this morning when the office was opened. When the doors were open, it looked for a time as though the crowd would be [illegible] the rush to get on the inside. A number of men were thrown off of the porch and instantly numerous revolvers flashed in the air. The police, however, took a hand in the affair and prevented any further disturbance.

This morning Mayor Spangler still station an officer at the door of the land office who will issue numbered tickets to those who desire to file and in the morning the numbers of these tickets will be called out and in this way further ramping out all night in front of the office will be avoided.

On the train which came in two feet night about 500 more people arrived. The conductor said that all of the roads leading to this city were filled with wagons, horsemen and pedestrians headed this way.

The report circulated last night that several persons had been killed, cannot be verified to day. This city to-day presents the appearance of a deserted town. Some of the principal places of business still remain closed up, the proprietors, clerks and help [illegible] towns. Among the noticeable people in line at the land office today was a woman who had made the race and who had driven a stake on a claim twelve miles east of here, which she had wanted in line for the past twelve hours on reaching the window learned that the claim for which she had made the race, and settled on had been filed on by a prominent attorney. The poor woman wept bitterly and said: "I have wanted for nearly two years with my family, consisting of two boys and one girl, for this claim. My boys were not old enough to keep a claim, so I made the race myself in order to be sure that everything was all right, and now on reaching here, I find it has been taken. My boys will go to work hard in the city or on a farm near Guthrie. We have a good team and the boys can with that make for us a living till the Cherokee strip is opened and then we will try again."

BASEBALL.

National League.

PITTSBURG-CLEVELAND.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Sept. 23.—The Pirates got hold of something today that they could handle with ease and they won a game hands down. The Spiders were never in sight of victory. Score: Pittsburg 12, Cleveland 3.

CHICAGO-CINCINNATI.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 23.—The Porkers celebrated their last regular game of the season on the home grounds by submitting gracefully to a coat of whitewash. They had had an amateur named Stephens in the box. The Colts had no trouble in winning. Score: Chicago 9, Cincinnati 0.

NEW YORK-PHILADELPHIA.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—New York and Philadelphia again played two games today and again each club carried away one victory. The first game was devoid of interest. In the second game both pitchers were on their metal and the game was exciting. Score: First game—New York 9, Philadelphia 7. Second game—New York 2, Philadelphia 3.

BOSTON-BROOKLYN.

BOSTON, Sept. 23.—By winning both games today the Bostons gained three points on the Chicagos. Brooklyn might have won the first game had they given Dave Foutz the support he deserved and had they run bases with anything like judgment. Foutz kept the hits pretty well scattered and pitched a much better game than the score would indicate. Score: Boston 5, Brooklyn 1.

In the second game Inks did the pitching but was not as successful as was Foutz. Besides this Ward's men played as if they were rattled. Score: Boston 9, Brooklyn 2.

Pueblo's Public Building.

DENVER, Sept. 23.—A Washington special to The Times says: There is a possibility now that the government will only be required to pay $1 for the public building site at Pueblo, Colo. Mr. Corlon, who is in Washington in the interest of his own property, had a hearing before Assistant Secretary Crouns late yesterday and presented very strong reasons, so Crouns says, why his site, located in South Pueblo, should be selected. He offers it to the government for $1. Crouns says nine other sites are offered, but prices range from $10,000 to $60,000. In addition to this, it is stated that it will cost $10,000 to build a proper foundation for any of these sites. Gordon's property is fully half a mile from any other of the sites offered. As [illegible] one if Crouns recommends that Gordon's property be purchased.

New York Stock Market.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—The stock market opened actively but prices were from ⅛ to ¼ per cent. lower. An upward movement then set in and the losses were generally made up. A reaction then followed and at noon the market was comparatively quiet and heavy at the lowest prices of the morning. There was a marked decrease in business, and during the afternoon hours the silence of the ticker was protracted enough to remind the listener of the dull days of two or three months ago. The slow marking down of prices continued throughout the day. All signs point now to tighter money, both here and in Europe. To-morrow the Bank of England, it is expected, will advance its minimum discount rate 1 per cent, and the open market rate has already anticipated the change.

In the last hour the professional sellers of the forenoon started in to cover. Some good outside buying orders were executed at the same time, particularly in Grangers and the closing showed substantial recovery from the day's lowest prices. Total sales 550,000 shares.

World's Fair Notes.

CHICAGO, Sept. 23.—Work on the Mines and Mining building of the World's Fair has progressed so far that the first of trusses to be put across the immense central arch, 120 feet in height, was put in position today and the stars and stripes floated to the breeze from its top in honor of the occasion.

The Woman's building is so well forward that the placing of ornamental stuff upon its outer walls will begin on Monday. The British, German and other foreign commissioners have about concluded their investigations.

Odd Fellows at St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 23.—The sovereign grand lodge of Odd Fellows reconvened this morning, business of a routine character was transacted up to 10:30. Reports from committees were submitted and memorials for grand jurisdiction were filed for action. At 10:30 the lodge went into secret session and all members of the order not active representatives were required to retire. This session lasted until past the noon hour and it was then stated that its duration would be limited only by the gravity and complexity of subjects under discussion.

Hot Weather in Illinois.

MONMOUTH, Ill., Sept. 23.—Two weeks ago the farmers of Warren county were praying for warm and dry weather to save the corn crops. Their petitions were more than granted. A big crop of corn is assured but the situation is alarming. The oldest residents never experienced better weather in September. Vegetation is literally burned up. Farmers are compelled to feed their stock as in winter and many are hauling water to the wells and streams daily. Yesterday and Monday the mercury registered 100 in the shade.

Drowned in a Ditch.

DENVER, Sept. 23.—The little 2-year-old daughter of Mrs. Felix Bordeaux while playing near the banks of the West Denver mill ditch this morning fell in and was drowned. The body was found an hour later by a team ster and taken to the morgue where the distracted mother found it.

Weather Indications.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—For Colorado—Local rains, cooler in eastern, stationary temperature in western portion.

STATE W. C. T. U.

The Twelfth Annual Meeting Commenced Yesterday.

THREE INTERESTING SESSIONS.

Papers Read on Questions of Interest to the Union—Mayor Sprague Welcomes Them—The Excellent Work by Young Women's Unions.

The twelfth annual meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Colorado began yesterday morning in the Christian church at 9 o'clock. Mrs. Eva Higgins presiding.

Devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. M. J. Fulford, after which a committee was appointed on credentials. This committee consisted of Mrs. Giddings, of this city, and Mrs. Corbin, of Fort Collins. Other committees appointed were those on resolutions and those on plan of work. The former consisted of Mrs. Cruise of Denver, Mrs. De Walter of Pueblo, and Mrs. Newton of Colorado Springs. In the latter committee were Mesdames Sperry, Shapleigh, Wallace, Kells and Hollingsworth. The reports of the different departments of work were read by the superintendents, and created considerable interest. A paper which was given a good deal of attention and which had evidently been carefully prepared was that read by Mrs. Craise. Another paper read was that on "Parliamentary Usage," by Mrs. Wallace of Boulder. Following this came the noon prayer, after which an elaborate luncheon was served in the church.

The afternoon session began sharply at 1:30 o'clock with the devotional exercises led by Mother Dangmore, president of the Salida union. The corresponding secretary's report was read by Miss Winfred Spaulding, of Pueblo. The treasurer's report, read by Mrs. C. M. Sharpleigh, of Denver, showed the total receipts of the union for the past year to be $1,326.03, the expenses $1,195.27, with a cash balance of $99.76. The money received from subscriptions to the state paper, "The Bulletin," amounted to $181.25.

Mayor Sprague was in the large attendance in the church, and he spoke briefly, welcoming the convention to the city, saying he was glad the members had come to a prohibition town.

Mrs. E. K. Reynolds of Pueblo conducted a mothers' institute very successfully. She has furnished 863 leaflets for the work and has borne all the expense without the aid of others. The report of the temperance temple at Chicago was read by Mrs. S. L. Tector of Denver.

The Young Woman's Christian Temperance union seems to have thrived during the past year, and particularly in the state of Colorado. Among other good works they have opened an exchange in Pueblo under the charge of Miss Winifred Spaulding, state superintendent of Y. W. C. T. U. work.

Among the interesting features of the evening session was an address by Mayor Sprague which received its full share of appreciation.

District Court.

The following business was transacted yesterday in the district court.

1487. George A. Neston et al vs. H. S. Haynes. Dismissed by plaintiffs at their costs.

1539. Hattie F. Brinker et al vs. The U. P. D. & G. Ry. Co. Trial order vacated.

1459. Marvellus C. Hendrickson vs. The Broadmoor Land and Improvement Co. Motion for change of venue sustained and case ordered transferred to another county.

1463. Fleming Sell vs. S. P. Richards. Default and judgment for plaintiff for $300.

1477. El Paso Livery Co. vs. Hiram Goddard. Demurrer to complaint argued and taken under advisement.

1494. Lewis A. Schump et al vs. N. C. Jones et al. Demurrer to complaint argued and sustained. Plaintiff given ten days in which to amend complaint.

Court will meet at 9:30 this morning.

1495. Parlin Manufacturing Co. vs. Wellen.

This Morning's Fire.

Sparks from a locomotive set fire to the Midland trestle, near where it crosses the Monument, west of the city this morning. The wind had fanned the flames until about sixteen feet of woodwork was involved before the alarm was given. The fire department responded promptly and by laying 1000 feet of hose the flames were extinguished. Two lengths of hose broke, which made some delay but the total loss was not considerable.

Arrivals in New York.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23. The Rev. Hugh Bruce Hughes, a prominent English Methodist divine and forty Methodist ministers arrived here today on the steamer City of New York, bound for the ecumenical council which is to be held in Washington on Oct. 7.

Col. R. S. Olcott, president and founder of the Theosophical society arrived here today. He is on his way to Japan to found a branch of the society there.

Lord Hawke and his English cricketers arrived by the steamer City of New York today. A committee from the Germantown cricket team of Philadelphia met the visitors at the pier. The team will play its first game in Philadelphia where a stand, reception and ball will be tendered the players on Oct. 10.

An Ex-Governor's Suicide.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 23.—A special from Marysville, Mo., says: Ex-Governor Albert P. Morehouse committed suicide at his residence at 9 o'clock this morning. Several weeks ago the governor was violently overheated while driving cattle, and has been in a very nervous condition since.

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH.

Will He Make England His Permanent Abiding Place?

[Special Correspondence.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—It is announced that Mr. Thomas Bailey Aldrich purposes a long residence in England, and some of his friends are inclined to think that he will make London his future home, making occasional visits to this country. Thus another one of the most famous American writers seems to have found either profit or fascination in living in England, and Mr. Aldrich will be added to that colony of self expatriated American literateurs who make London their home, and among whom are Bret Harte, Henry James, Mrs. Burnett, Harold Frederick, and, for a time at least, Mark Twain, although he is now in Paris.

There are many good critics who rate Mr. Aldrich as perhaps the most accomplished and most delightful writer of American fiction. He is not as a writer of fiction that Mr. Aldrich desires to win his highest fame. As he is now approaching the youth of old age, Mr. Aldrich finds the poetic inspiration his strongest impulse. Unlike many poets, the divine spark in him seems to burn more fiercely as the years advance. He has told his friends that he finds the atmosphere of London, foggy and damp as it is, far more congenial to him while he is composing his poems than the keen wind of Boston or the more delightful atmosphere of New York. Strangely, Mr. Aldrich finds that he can think in London [illegible] life to secure in America, and that is seclusion.

Mr. Aldrich is now past fifty years of age, and he is probably the youngest looking man for his years that can be found in all the literary ranks. Unlike many writers Mr. Aldrich keeps on the most excellent terms with his tailors, and for that reason he appears in quite fashionable attire, although he never overdresses. He is also conspicuous in literary gatherings, because of his most delicately waxed mustache. Those who see him for the first time are inclined to think that Mr. Aldrich is disposed to be foppish, but this opinion does him an injustice. He is exquisite in all his tastes, and as a result of his personal appearance as he is of his literary compositions. It is a part of his creed that of all persons a writer should be the most careful of the personal proprieties, and he has no patience with a man who excuses a slovenly attire on the ground that he is too busy with his pen to pay any heed to personal appearance.

Mr. Aldrich did not begin his career in literary venture. He expected to become a merchant, and he was engaged in mercantile pursuits in New York for some time before he discovered what his gifts were. One or two little poems which he wrote on a sudden impulse and which were sent to The Atlantic attracted the attention of James T. Fields and James Russell Lowell, and Mr. Aldrich was asked to contribute again. It was in a similar way that William D. Howells began his literary period.

Soon after this Mr. Aldrich wrote an exquisite short story, which gave him immediate repute, and this effort was followed by that fascinating tale which has been the delight of every boy and many a man whose good fortune it has been to get a copy, and which was entitled, "The Story of a Bad Boy." Of its kind, this work is esteemed a masterpiece, and if Mr. Aldrich had never written anything else it would have made his fame secure.

After the resignation of Mr. Howells of the editorship of The Atlantic Monthly, Mr. Aldrich very reluctantly accepted the place. He made a good editor, but the work was never congenial to him. In the first place, he was too tender hearted to refuse manuscript without suffering himself to bleed, and in the next place, editorial drudgery was abhorrent. He therefore resigned his post, and as he is of independent fortune he was able to give himself up to a life of literary leisure. He has three or four long poems in mind, to the completion of which he expects to devote many years as may be necessary.

JAMES R. GILMORE.

Something About the Later Life of Edmund Kirke.

[Special Correspondence.]

GRAND VIEW, N. Y., Sept. 21.—At this lovely spot on the west bank of the Hudson, about twenty-five miles away from the roar of the busy city, and only a half hour's drive above the New Jersey line and the end of the Palisades, lives James R. Gilmore, the Edmund Kirke so famous thirty years ago, and also now, at the age of seventy-five, still actively engaged in literary pursuits.

Across the broad expanse of the Hudson, shining in the sunlight with varied colored tints, which here has taken the width it has where its waters have the dark and piers of the great metropolis in Tarrytown, a trifle to the northward, a lovely opposite, is Irvington, with a glimpse of Jay Gould's superior mansion in the background, and the old Dobbs Ferry below, awakening recollections of the Sleepy Hollow legends of Irving, and the tragical ending of the unfortunate British soldier, for Tappan, with its Washington's headquarters and the Andre monument (sadly mutilated), are just to the south.

His home, a handsome, spacious and ample villa, clings to the hillside with a lawn in front just large enough for a country ground, while 700 feet below is the Hudson river, a rolling movement to day. The working room of ample dimensions, containing a choice library, is at the back of the house, on the second story, with corner windows at two ends, looking out again on the [illegible] of shades, trees and foliage, but the set of cool and quiet these environments so dear to the heart of the student and writer are here in their maximum serenity and [illegible] the house is surrounded by porches and verandas.

His last novel, "A Mountain White Heroine," which has sold largely, will unfortunately prove a losing speculation to him for the time being, owing to the general financial embarrassment of the publishers, the Belford Magazine company, and no royalties have yet been paid him. This is a family affair, however. Having withdrawn from all editorial supervision of White's "Cyclopedia," he is now steadfastly engaged in the preparation of "Gilmore's Cyclopedia" (a labor of love and the realization of a life's desire), a work to cost a set of six octavo volumes.

Mr. Gilmore, in his public capacity as Lincoln's secretary and confidential friend, and in his private relation as lecturer, editor and author, has had the personal acquaintance of a great host of the leading men and women of the country, and he consequently writes on a topic in the execution of what will undoubtedly become of the literary successes of the present year. He bears testimony to the valuable aid derived from the keen insight and mental capacity of his charming and intellectual wife.

Try to Remember Facts.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 23.—The ability to readily recall names and faces is of paramount importance to the individual ambitious for a public career. To the politician it is a cardinal virtue. A natural gift to many, it may be acquired by vigilance. The late Judge Alphonso Taft, ex-United States minister to Russia, was a brilliant example of the total absence of this happy faculty, or the ability to acquire it. A man of splendid presence, solid attainments and utterly opposite, he was utterly powerless to recall names or faces, and to this lamentable defect his friends attributed his failure to secure the gubernatorial nomination as the convention that nominated Charles Foster to his first term as governor of Ohio.

Every delegate to a man was for Judge Taft previous to the convention. Assembled at Cincinnati, all the delegates were introduced, and with some the judge spent many hours, to forget when he next met them that he had ever seen them before.

The chairman of the state convention, with whom the judge spent half a day at Columbus previous to the convention, was obliged to introduce himself when he entered the judge's office at Cincinnati. His friends overlooked this defect of memory but the majority of the delegates were deeply wounded. "We won't vote for a man who forgets that he has ever met us. If we haven't enough individuality to assure us being called by our proper name, we ought to have sufficient sense to withhold our vote from the man that denies us this recognition."

In the dissatisfaction that ensued Mr. Foster, who never fails to call a man by his proper name and inquire for the wife and babies, loomed up a rival candidate, and, all unpremeditated, Foster secured the nomination, thereby sealing his subsequent political career.

Marvelous Fecundity.

The reproductive powers of many bacteria is so marvelous as to be almost beyond belief. Professor Law has experimented with several different fungi, which were capable of doubling their number every hour. Again the [illegible] single bacterium will give 16,777,216 individuals in the short space of twenty-four hours. In forty-eight hours the offspring from a germ not measuring more than one fifteen thousandth of an inch will have increased until their bulk [illegible] about be put in a half pint measure, the [illegible] number of individuals then exceeding 281,500,000,000. Colorado hangings seem rather preferable to New York's electric executions.

Pueblo is much excited over the question of the location of her new government building. Pueblo will deserve this fate, but if they were more justly distributed Colorado Springs would have it.

The thorough enforcement of the law at the time of the Oklahoma opening greatly helped to make the scenes on the occasion opened Tuesday peaceful. Already the excitement has greatly subsided and it is scarcely more likely that trouble will occur there now than anywhere else in the United States.

A slight cloud in the financial firmament appears in the scarcity of ready money in the London market. The causes which should make money plentiful in this country are the ones which will make it scarce in London, viz: the abundance of American crops, the failures of those of Europe, the decrease of American purchases of European goods, the demand abroad for American transit securities. Yet such is the unity of the world's finance and commerce, that a scarcity in London reacts on New York even though the scarcity be caused by specie shipments to America.

The best test of a law is its success. Senator Saunders' report on polygamy in Utah will be read with interest by all, and by none more than those who were inclined to question the efficiency of the law. A few indeed will doubt whether the betterment is more than apparent, and it is true that many Mormons are involuntary compliers with the law, and think that they are only laying low until the storm blows over. But this enforced compliance is evidence of the law's force and strictness. So also while it may be said that the disappearance of polygamy is largely due to the progress of the territory and the influx of population, it is in large measure to the law itself that may be attributed this material prosperity. It is gratifying to know that the "twin relic" of barbarism is being so successfully stamped out and that without any need of an appeal to force of arms.

The riots against foreigners continue and it seems likely that the Europeans and Americans will have to defend themselves by force of arms or else abandon the country altogether. To the latter alternative there would be vigorous objections both by the missionaries and the merchants of silk, tea and other eastern products. If a policy of force were adopted it is not likely that China could offer a successful resistance. She is well able to order and pay for a half million improved rifles from Europe, and could easily find men for them, but a prolonged campaign on land is entirely out of the question. As to the Chinese navy, it has lately been considerably improved, but is yet no match for the allied fleets. One thing is sure. The lives and property of Americans must not continue to be sacrificed through the weak nix or connivance of Chinese officials. Our government ought to take immediate measures for their protection.

Italy's Majority.

New York Tribune.

This is the twenty-first anniversary of the occupation of Rome by the Italian forces. That event completed the work of Italian unity begun in 1848, when King Charles Albert proclaimed a constitution and imparted an irresistible impulse to the national movement. The conversion of the papal city and what may be described as the heroic period in the modern history of the nation.

It was the age when Cavour advocated the blessings of parliamentary government and solved the problem of a free church in a free state; when Victor Emmanuel, the soldier king, formed coalitions against Austria and then against France, and liberated his country by keen and audacious diplomacy as much as by warfare; and when Garibaldi, as the type of the man of action as any age has known, dared to accomplish what statesmen, parliamentarians and economists could not do. Since the occupation of Rome a period of commonplace has intervened, during which the illusions of idealism cherished during the heroic days may have been shattered. There have been no great achievements since Sept. 20, 1870, but there has been substantial progress with an orderly development of the material resources and political activities of the nation.

During this late period of twenty-one years while unlike Italy with Rome as its political center has been attaining to its majority, Renan's significant comment on the making of nations has been confirmed. "There are times," he has remarked, "when the world gives men of mind and culture a broad hint that it has no occasion for their services, and that on the whole it gets on much better without them." Italian ministers have been the main men of second rate ability in comparison with Cavour, Mazzini, Ricasoli and Rattazzi. They have been employed in working out prosaic questions of a trade, currency and industrial progress. They have done nothing that was conspicuous in the sight of the Latin races. They have organized a great army, built a powerful fleet, and contrived to maintain diplomatic alliances with the two nations having the heaviest battalions on the continent; but they have not made the influence of Italy of commanding importance in Europe. It has been an era of ministerial labors and dull debates on taxation and economy, yet practical stability of a high order has been secured. Beginning without credit in the beginning of the continent, they have converted a deficit of revenue into a surplus, disposed with undeniable currency, funded the national loans and promoted stability of finance. They have tunnelled the highest mountains and constructed a great system of railways, and while successful in colonization, have made Italy a great force in the industrial world.

It is this large measure of material prosperity which is the crowning result of the revolutionary cycle, dating with the occupation of Rome. The intellectual life of the country has become the legacy of Giosue Carducci. Carducci in his 55 years was invited to accept the Jubilee ode which he composed, but long as it is, it could figure out a surplus of revenue and to wonder whether it had been worth while to liberate Italy. The expectations formed by idealists in a century's lapsed age are never fulfilled. Material progress and the steady growth of self government are gains for civilization, but there is nothing in the achievements of practical legislation and political administration to fire the imagination of youth. What can be truthfully said of Italy is that the best traditions of the heroic period have never been surpassed. The occupation of Rome enabled a victorious king and army to carry out Cavour's policy of nationalizing the Church without disturbing the religious liberties of people or priests. For twenty-one years the prisoners of the Vatican have maintained a certain attitude of defiance to the political institutions, but the philosophy of the free church in the free state has never been compromised by king or ministers, and it is triumphant to-day.

LITERARY NOTES.

The Dardanelles incident has called fresh attention to the danger to the peace of Europe given by the Turkish question. The historian, Edward A. Freeman, who is perhaps the best informed student of the eastern question in the world, is preparing an article for the Forum on the Peace of Europe, in which he will set forth the delicate relations of all the European governments to another threatening danger point.

Wolcott Balestier, who was collaborated with Rudyard Kipling in the new novel which The Century will publish, is a young American now living in London. He is a writer and a business man as well, being a member of the recently organized firm of Heinemann & Balestier, of Leipsic, which is publishing a series of copyrighted English and American novels on the continent of Europe in the fashion of the Tauchnitz editions.

Miss Alice M. Fletcher, of the United States Interior Department and the Peabody Museum, Cambridge, will contribute to The Century in 1892 the results of her studies of the American Indian in a series of illustrated papers. They will give an intimate account of how the Indian thinks and feels, his music, home life, warfare, hunting customs, etc., and it is the opinion of Prof. Putnam of Harvard that they will undoubtedly be the most important papers that have ever been published on the subject, and that they will give an entirely different idea of the Indian from that now commonly prevailing. The series will be called "The Indian's Side."

The startling fact is shown by reports of the Massachusetts commissioners of prisons that during the last fifty years, while the population of the state has only trebled, the number of criminals has increased fifty fold. There is one prisoner to every 400 inhabitants in the state, and in Boston one to every 200 inhabitants. This large proportion, however, includes recommitments. These facts are interpreted by Mr. William P. Andrews, for many years clerk of the criminal court at Salem, Mass., as evidence that the "reformatory" conduct of prisons has caused an alarming increase of crime, and that the substitution of reformatory for punitive treatment is fast bringing on a state socialism through the attractiveness of prison life. Mr. Andrews will contribute an article to the October Forum, continuing the results of many years' observation of the working of the two systems.

How to Clean Matting.

Wash it with a cloth wrung out of salt water or sprinkle it with Indian meal, and then sweep thoroughly.

How to Make Paper Comforters.

Fasten two layers of soft paper or newspaper between two sheets of cheap calico or cheesecloth. This will make a warm and very light coverlet for winter use.

How to Keep a Pipe Sweet.

A pipe should not be smoked too continuously. When a bowlful of tobacco has been burned up the pipe should be taken apart, the bowl cleaned, the stem swabbed out with a straw or wire and the joints wiped free of nicotine. If this be always done the pipe will never get strong or foul. This is a deal of trouble, but a good smoke is worth some pains. A good plan for an inveterate pipe smoker is to have a pipe for each day in the week. One for Mondays, one for Tuesdays and so on. In this way each pipe has a week's rest, and if each one is cleaned before its vacation the pipe smoker will get delight from his pipes which he never realized before.

THE FUTURE IS BRIGHT.

WALTER WELLMAN WRITES FROM NEBRASKA

He Says the Outlook Is Very Hopeful—How "The Great American Desert" Has Been Made to Blossom as the Rose—Can Farmers Make Money?

(Special Correspondence.)

YORK, Neb., Sept. 17.—Just twenty years ago I came into this part of the state of Nebraska in a covered wagon. A few days ago I came again, on a free pass, and I find the country so interesting that I think I'll tell you something about it. Twenty years ago the private dwelling here was a house upon which I am now writing. It was as bleak and bare a prairie as you could picture in your mind's eye. Not a tree, nor even a shrub, was in sight as far as the vision could reach, nothing but a stretch of level country, on the surface of which a thick crop of grass grew.

They were a pretty poor lot of people who came here then and later to make homes for themselves. If they had been well to do they would not have left the east to come out to the "Great American Desert" to coax a livelihood out of the virgin soil. They were the people who had not been able to get a good foothold in the east. Many of them were those who had been distanced in the race for wealth while at the front fighting the battles of their country. Here they found a rich soil, a healthful climate and nothing else. At first they lived in sod houses, with roofs of brush and hay, and floors of clay, or in "dugouts" burrowed out of the sides of little canyons.

UNCLE JERRY'S NEBRASKA CORN.

The soil, you see, was everything. Not only was it the only source of revenue, present or prospective, but it grew their building material in the shape of a closely knit turf, and the hard clay subsoil served as a floor for their dwellings. With lumber at sixty dollars a thousand and brick and stone and other materials at higher prices, he was a comparatively rich man who could build even the smallest and most modest of frame houses. Coal was twenty dollars a ton, clothing and all the necessaries of life as dear as high freights and mercantile greed could make them, and the markets far, far away.

In telling you that these men have won their fight here I am telling you nothing that you do not already know; but you may be interested in the details of this modern conquest, in which the victory is literally won, yearly, by some of the men. First, the prairie was turned over by the plow. This was a simple though laborious operation. Three horses and a heavy plow, with a knife to cut the thick turf, could "break" two acres a day. The first year a scant crop of sod corn was raised, good only for feed. But the second year a full crop grew.

Not much care is taken in returning to the soil that which it gives, nor in conserving the fertility of the land by change of crops or conversion of tilled fields into pastures. Year after year this magnificent soil of what was once known as the "Great American Desert" has met every demand made upon it. It has more than fulfilled every expectation. Nor has there ever been a complete failure of crops in this section. In twenty years there have been four short crops, due once to grasshoppers, and on other occasions to droughts and early frosts.

Notwithstanding their distance from market, these people have prospered. I suppose they grew as much about hard times as any other farmers, and with about as much cause. Not many of them are rich, and some are still in debt, hard pushed, discontented. Debt is the curse of this as it is of any other country.

"What is the matter with so many of your farmers here?" I asked a successful business man, who had himself made money at farming. "Why are they still poor and pushed?"

"It is easy enough to explain," he replied. "They came out here from the older and richer farming country of the east. Here they became, many of them for the first time in their lives, farmers on their own account. Human nature is pretty much the same the world over, and as soon as these men began to feel the pride of proprietorship they wanted buggies to drive to town in, riding plows and riding cultivators, good horses and cows and all sorts of modern but expensive farming machinery. To get all these things they were compelled to run in debt, to discount the future. They were not ready to deny themselves at first, and having once entered upon a policy of this kind they find it impossible to stop. They are always pressed for money, and the result is that just as soon as they harvest a crop they must rush it off to market to keep the sheriff from the door. Were they able to hold their product a few months they could get much better prices for it. The farmer who remains poor in this country is the farmer who goes in debt and keeps his nose on the grindstone. Everything he buys he must buy at the highest prices, because he buys on time, and pays interest besides; everything he sells he must sell at the lowest prices, because he must sell immediately."

"Then, you think money can be made at farming in this country?"

"I know it can. I have made it myself. Ten or twelve years ago I had a farm of 160 acres. I tilled it myself—my wife and I. Our first year we lived in a sodhouse, and our living expenses were fifty-three dollars. My nearest neighbor had just as good a farm as mine but he went in debt for a frame house. He rode to church and town in a top buggy bought on time. He plowed and cultivated on riding plows. That man looked down on me because I plodded along in the old way with the old fashioned machinery and implements. When he and his wife drove to church in their olee buggy, passing my wife and me in our old wagon, he scarcely deigned to speak to us. When the crops were harvested he had to rush his off to market to meet his notes and his interest. I held mine till winter and got 40 per cent more than he did. Next year it was the same, and when his buggy and his riding plows and things were about worn out, though not paid for, I bought new ones for one-third less than he had paid for his, because I bought for cash. To make a long story short, he is still struggling under a load of debt, with mortgages hanging over him. The mortgage on his farm I own, and he pays me 10 per cent a year interest on it.

"Are interest rates high out here?"

"Yes, but the fault is the borrower's and not the lender's. Men of doubtful solvency—men who have always been discounting the future, and who had but a narrow margin between payment and bankruptcy—have had to pay as high as 2 per cent a month for money. There is no business in the world that can stand such a rate of interest. Certainly farming can't stand it. Hundreds and thousands of such in this county have for years been paying that rate on chattel mortgages and from 12 to 15 per cent a year on real estate security. These are the men who growl, who say the farmer is oppressed, that farming can't be made to pay."

"Is the future brighter?"

"For the farming community as a whole it certainly is. The agricultural interests of the west are just emerging from the period of debt. Farmers who plunged into debt ten or twelve years ago, expecting to work out in two or three years, are now recovering, but better late than never. Interest rates are coming down, and it is no longer possible to get the usurious rates of 2 per cent and 24 per cent a month paid a few years ago. Many farmers are now able to hold all or a part of their crops for better prices. We are now selling corn at forty cents which we grew in 1889 and cribbed rather than sell then at fifteen or sixteen cents. This year the west has magnificent crops and a prospect of good prices. If corn matures as it promises, we shall have the greatest yield of the last twenty years, and the short crops abroad ought to give us such an era of prosperity as we never had before. This red letter year of 1891 should lift from and upon thousands of western farmers out of the clutches of the sharpers and into that state of independence in which they can hereafter buy the cheapest for cash and sell the highest, because they can sell when they want to, not when they must."

Certainly this fertile section of the "Great American Desert" has been made to blossom as the rose. Where twenty years ago was a bare, bleak prairie, with here and there a sodhouse or a "dugout," now are pretty farmsteads by the thousand. The houses are of frame, painted, surrounded by lawns, flowers and fruits. Every farm has an acre or more of trees, planted by the settlers fifteen or twenty years ago. I stood yesterday under the shade of a magnificent elm, its trunk a foot thick, which I planted in the year 1873. Nearly all of this county is under cultivation. In a farm of 160 acres 140 in the average will be under plow. One man, with a helper and two teams, will cultivate these 140 acres, raising in a year like this three or four thousand dollars worth of wheat, corn, oats and barley.

At the state fair in Lincoln, the capital of the state, a few days ago, I saw something which I must tell Jerry Rusk about when I return to Washington.

SPECIMEN GROWN IN NEBRASKA CORN.

While on his western trip with President Harrison the secretary of agriculture told a Nebraska audience that in California he had seen cornstalks thirty feet high, with a bushel of ears on each stalk. "But here in Nebraska," said the jovial secretary, giving his imagination full play in a desire to please his hearers, "I expect to hear of your raising corn as big as trees, every stalk filled with shelled corn."

The farmers of Nebraska have taken Mr. Rusk at his word and at the state fair have fulfilled his prophecy by erecting a little grove of artificial cornstalks, from the hollow of which they draw shelled corn through spouts. In addition to this they have a derrick lifting a Brobdingnagian ear of corn from the top of a sixteen story stalk, and several other pretty conceits which I am sure Uncle Jerry will be glad to hear about.

ANNA DICKINSON.

Her Present Home Is at Dr. Seward's Interpines, Goshen, N. Y.

(Special Correspondence.)

GOSHEN, N. Y., Sept. 17.—Miss Dickinson is now living here, eighteen miles from Newburg, in the family of Dr. Frederick W. Seward, whose home, Interpines, is an elegant and picturesque residence, in the midst of an extensive and romantic park, the grounds adorned with a grove of tall, stately pines, maples and chestnuts. The room she occupies is a large and handsome one, charmingly furnished in antique oak, with an atmosphere of quiet and luxury. A favored guest with people who love her, she may be found daily, comfortably seated at ease in the favorite old green leather covered study chair that once belonged to Charles Sumner, the picture of health and happiness and surrounded by her favorite books as she busily writes. The claim of her legions of friends that she is still the most gifted female orator of the day is universally conceded.

She has not been to her home (Pittston, Pa.) since her five weeks' incarceration in the asylum at Danville that state, but lectures—the last time at Goshen, on Aug. 13—and has been actively engaged in magazine, syndicate and newspaper work. Her wonderful knowledge of the prominent men and women of this country, in the past quarter century and more, even to the smallest personal details, including hundreds of the residents in and about New York city, will all be utilized and depicted in her contemplated large volume that will consist of Reminiscences and Recollections (and may be called by that title at present), since, at the age of sixteen, she was called to present an embodiment of her views on the slavery question before the Thirty-eighth congress. It will most assuredly be an interesting and instructive work.

There is also some slight contemplation of another attempt to achieve histrionic honors and, more probably, a renewal of her dramatic work following "The American Girl" and "Anrelian," the latter tragedy hardly regarded as a stage success, but of which a famous critic wrote that "there seems to be nothing that in any degree will approach the literary excellence of this beautiful dramatic creation, which will unquestionably live as a classic of the stage."

She has finally regained her full strength, her physical system has recovered from the agonizing strain placed upon her and her mental faculties are brilliant and unimpaired.

At the Court of a South Sea King.

A Narrative of Life on the Gilbert Islands, an out-of-the-way Group of the South Pacific Ocean.

BY

ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON.

A new series of letters by ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON, describing his experiences and adventures in the Gilbert Islands. This is a group cut off from all regular intercourse with the outside world, to which no mail goes, and where only occasional trading vessels touch.

Life in this strange place is most interesting and picturesque. The articles are full of incidents and anecdotes, delightful character sketches of queer people, and dramatic bits of dialogue. The narrative is as captivating as a piece of fiction, full of color, of movement, of strange situations and pictures. The material is altogether fresh and novel. In these papers Stevenson is at his best; they show in its full maturity the charming style of the most perfect master of English of our day.

I. IN A DESERT SEA. Arrival at Butaritari. Island characteristics. The King's palace not so commodious as a laborer's house in the United States. A visit to the King.

II. THE FOUR BROTHERS. The story of a South Sea chieftain. The King acts as executioner. The harem of a tropical potentate. A prince who was nicknamed "Mr. Corpse."

III. AROUND MY HOUSE. Strange sights from the writer's house in the Gilbert Islands. A sea wall built by the hands of queens. The toddy cutters. Beautiful women of the South Pacific. Only one white woman in the islands. A sample ruffian of the South Seas. The parson of Butaritari.

IV. A TALE OF A TAPU. The King of the Cannibal Islands on a spree. Curious scenes at Court.

V. MORE CONCERNING THE TAPU. Spies about us. Attack by natives. In danger from drunkards.

VI. THE FIVE DAYS' FESTIVAL. Invited to the King's summer house. A concert of native singers. A barbaric opera. A wonderfully dramatic dance. A South Sea topical song. A native who made a flying machine. A magic lantern show.

VII. HUSBAND AND WIFE IN THE GILBERTS. "A Paradise of Naked Women." Polygamy in the South Seas. Etiquette among the natives. Scenes in a Gilbertine household.

VIII. THE KING OF APEMAMA. The royal trader. The hero of song and the butt of gossip. The last of the South Sea tyrants. A savage Napoleon. An island chief who owns ships.

IX. HOW THE KING BUILT A TOWN FOR STEVENSON. Constructing a city in a day. Walled by a taboo.

X. THE PALACE OF MANY WOMEN. A retinue of dusky ladies. An evening with the King. A game of royal inventions. A kingly poet of the Southern Seas.

XI. OUR ATTENDANT FROM THE PALACE. Uncle Parker and his sleight-of-hand performance. The royal cook, and how he was disgraced.

GETTING LONDON NEWS.

YANKEE CORRESPONDENTS AT THE WORLD'S CAPITAL.

They Enjoy Life Like on the Fat of the Land and Are Made Welcome by Persons of Consequence, but They Work Hard.

[Special Correspondence.]

LONDON, Sept. 7.—There is probably no post in journalism which American newspaper men desire so much as that of London correspondent. The situation is not only highly paid but it involves no still degree of dignity and importance. The editor is a relief to open the most [illegible] hard working writers. The London correspondent is as nearly his own master as any man can be who attached to a daily newspaper. It is understood that at so great a distance from the home office his judgment must be relied upon, and no wise employer is apt to assigning a man to London without expecting to rely upon the correspondent's discretion and faithfulness. It ought to follow, then, that the handful of American reporters in this city should be the cream of the profession. Whether that is so in every instance the writer cannot say, but he has found an uninteresting lot of fellows, faithful and industrious.

"Industrious" might seem to be a misnomer to some of the rank and file in America, if they should take a casual glance at the men as they appear in the corridors and smoking rooms of the great clubs. For just an instant the American reporter might think that these boys are having a good time and devoting themselves assiduously to good dress, spacious apartments and dignified ease generally. The judgment would be a sudden one. That they have a good time is pretty certain, for they enjoy their work, and for the most of them work takes them necessarily to places where men of wealth and position congregate. While the correspondent is sitting with a group of men he is on the qui vive for an item of news, or a story for his Sunday letter. There is a place for him at important banquets, he is welcomed at many social functions. In other respects which reporters care all about he is an established figure in English life.

Not more than three or four of the correspondents are concerned in furnishing "market news," that is, stock quotations, market reports, financial proceedings, ordinary calamities and the like. All this is relegated to the news associations that have their offices there and their staffs of local reporters. In these instances Americans are at the head of the London offices of these associations, but their employees are almost without exception English men. To them the London newspapers are an invaluable aid, and much of their work is sent directly from the printed page after they have appeared on the streets. The six hours' difference in time between London and New York makes a perfectly legitimate and feasible division of gathering.

For instance, some of the important news papers appear at 1 o'clock. It is but a few minutes after 7 in New York, an hour when the evening newspaper offices are deserted, unless some enterprising office boy has come down unusually early to clean up. By wiring important news of the day at any time before 2 p. m. the American papers are supplied hours before they would be able to issue an edition. The same rule follows with the morning papers, though the results are not quite so satisfactory. It is quite possible, however, to send everything of importance in the London morning papers so as to reach New York by midnight, and every [illegible] station takes a hand in this kind of work.

The correspondents of these individual papers do not concern themselves with the manner of hustling. They devote their efforts, as I have indicated, to getting inside information, working up special topics, that by the very reason of their American flavor would not naturally be covered by the London press. The dean of the correspondents here is, perhaps, Mr. G. W. Smalley, of the New York Tribune. His appointment dates from the early seventies. He lives in a fashionable neighborhood and does not mingle much with his rivals, who are nearly all much younger than himself and naturally not the most congenial of mates. Mr. Smalley is decidedly a leader in British society, and it is there he shines.

Next to him in seniority of appointment is Mr. Harold Frederic, the correspondent for the New York Times. His work has been a brilliant one on this side where he has been stationed for eight years. He, too, appears to be natural in London, but he frequently makes long trips to the Continent in pursuit of special topics. The result of these trips was a series of articles in The Times about the young German emperor. It was these articles, published in book form a few weeks ago, that made the greatest literary sensation of the year. It is not necessary to speak of Mr. Frederic's novels, for everybody knows about them. It might also be different saying that he is preparing another. He is never idle, and even a casual observer may wonder how he can find time to do all his work.

Arthur Warren represents the Herald. He is about thirty-one years old, and a man whose enthusiasm for his profession I have seldom seen equaled. He lives in a beautiful apartment house in the district known as Kensington, and from his windows he commands a fine view of the Thames, Battersea Park and a great stretch of the habitable city.

By common consent the hardest working American newspaper man in London is E. Tracy Greaves, correspondent of the New York World. He has offices in Trafalgar square, where you may with a reasonable chance of finding him at any hour of the day or night. Not satisfied with pursuing the game of news so indefatigably, he has recently employed an American assistant in the person of Mr. John J. a Becket, the author of many charming short stories in American magazines. Mr. A. Becket was attached to The Evening World before his recent transfer to this city.

The New York Sun's bright young man, Mr. Frank Marshall White, at one time the literary editor of Life. Mr. White is an editor on the Strand, and in addition to other missions, is frequently on the continent on special missions. Every inch a gentleman, at least, known his Sunday [illegible] which is in many respects is the best of all the correspondence sent from London. He has no regular assistant, but the work demanded by The Sun of a character to require it, on Saturdays, when his letter is in addition to his own work, he has a half dozen others assisting the town under his direction.

The New York Herald, long famous for its foreign news, is represented here by two men, Messrs. James [illegible] and T. B. Fielders. Mr. [illegible] came here from the New York Herald a little more than two years ago. Shortly afterward Mr. Greenhan came to take charge of the Herald's London office. Since then, however, he has been flying about all over Europe and writing all manner of articles that have had great sensational interest by reason of the topics treated. It is worth recalling that it was he who secured the famous interview with the pope and more recently he has published a sad controversy between himself and Count Tolstoi about the "The Kreutzer Sonata."

A short time ago Mr. Greenhan was detailed to London, and he and Fielders are co-operating in the work of sending news to America. There is another American newspaper man here connected with The Herald in the capacity of editor of the Sunday paper. This is Mr. Ralph B. Blumenfeld. He had been for a long time the city editor of The Telegram. The Herald's evening edition in New York. Under his management the London paper has become very prosperous, and appears to be still moving on to that respectful recognition which English people are so slow to grant to American enterprises.

Among other young American newspaper men now stationed here are Mr. H. J. W. Dam, correspondent for the New York Recorder; Mr. Louis Moore, representative of the United Press; Mr. Walter Kidell, chief of the Associated Press office, and Mr. Horace Townsend, formerly a New York Tribune reporter. Both Messrs. Dam and Townsend are writing rather more for the English press than for the American, and Dam has brought himself somewhat to the front by a play, "Diamond Deane"—which was produced at the Vaudeville last March.

Nearly all these men appear to regard London as a permanent residence, for the bachelors among them have fitted up comfortable chambers (English for apartments) and the married men have taken long leases of houses or flats. Some of the bachelors, like Greenhan, are babbling of marriage when the leaves have fallen. Nearly all are club men, the famous Savage claiming their first allegiance, of course, and the National Liberal coming perhaps second.

FREDERICK R. BURTON.

Young Clergymen.

Chicago, Sept. 11.—Rev. Howard MacQueary, of Canton, O., whose advanced views have caused so much comment, is but thirty-one years of age. Since his suspension from the ministry he has preached to large congregations in every city he has visited, and has had many requests to lecture and to write for magazines. Mr. MacQueary's book, "The Evolution of Man and Christianity," has had a remarkable sale for a theological work but a little over a year old.

Rev. Thomas Dixon, Jr., is another preacher who has attracted a great deal of attention during the past year. But although aggressive and strongly personal, hesitating not to speak on the subjects of the day, to attack our system of politics and to condemn the sin in high places he may deem guilty, he is nevertheless, as thoroughly orthodox. His church—the Twenty-third Street Baptist, New York soon proved too small to accommodate the crowds that flocked to hear the bold, magnetic preacher. The beautiful little church was closed, and the congregation had to seek temporary quarters in the large Association Hall of the Y. M. C. A. Mr. Dixon is a North Carolinian, thirty years of age, the son of a clergyman and has two brothers in the ministry. He is a little over six feet tall, is wiry, smooth shaven and handsome looking.

Probably the youngest bishop in the United States is the recently elected assistant bishop of Louisiana, Rev. David Sessums. He is practically a bishop, inasmuch as the physical infirmities of Bishop Galleher render him unfit for ceremonial duties. Mr. Sessums was born at Houston, Tex., in 1858. He graduated from the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn., with first honors, in his twenty-first year, and in 1887 he was admitted to the priesthood.

Thomas Bailey Aldrich.

BOSTON, Sept. 17.—Mr. Thomas Bailey Aldrich is at present in Switzerland, traveling for recreation pure and simple. He is no longer editor of the Atlantic Monthly. He has a charming home in Boston on Beacon Hill. Mr. Aldrich is about fifty years old, although he looks much younger. He has dark brown hair powdered with gray, hazel eyes and a heavy mustache. He is an eccentric dresser, inclining to the Dickens style of male friends, and affects stunning trousers, gay plaid silk waistcoats, Norfolk jackets and red ties.

He is a brilliant and entertaining conversationist. His English is most carefully selected, and he speaks slowly and with great precision. He is said to be the most delightful host imaginable, and while he has no penchant for athletics, he is interested in topics that concern women and is a great favorite of the fair sex.

EUGENE MIX

How to Have in Every room a Place for Scraps.

A scrapbasket is not needed in each room, but some place where tiny order destroyers, such as bits of lint, ravelings, lime or paper can be dropped out of sight, is worth having. These in the chambers can also be used for hair combings. Take small boxes of any shape, say stocking or soap boxes, remove the edge that goes around the lid, and cover all the rest of the box and lid with colored muslin, over which dotted swiss is to be placed. Frills of narrow lace are put around the bottom and the lid, the latter being sewed on at one side and furnished with a loop to lift it by. These dainty scrapholders can find places on bureaus or tables.

How to Deal with a Case of Poisoning.

Salt and mustard are the great reliance for many reasons. They are found in every house; they can be given instantly; they produce vomiting quicker than other substances in common use, and the danger of overdosing is practically nothing. Another reason is that they are almost equally good whether the poison be a narcotic (opium, laudanum, etc.) or like arsenic or strychnine. The main object in either case is to get as much of it as possible out of the stomach at once. After thorough vomiting is produced pour in hot, strong coffee for an opiate or two or three whites of raw eggs for acid poisons. Raw eggs and hot coffee suit a greater number of poisons than any other articles in common use.

A Fortune Out of Tips.

Guests at the Grand Pacific hotel in Chicago miss the familiar face of old John Cullerton, who for twenty-five years has been the head porter at the hotel. Illness compelled him to retire from the position at the age of seventy, and with a fortune of $100,000 accumulated from the tips given him by travelers.—New York World.

The Advice of a Bermudan.

"Waiter, will you please bring me a hammer?"

The loud, imperious voice rang clearly through the gilded dining hall. A hundred pairs of eyes looked up in astonishment. The rattle of knives, forks and spoons ceased. The hum of conversation died away. Even the appetizing odors that hung over the luxurious tables seemed to loose their hold on the senses and a score of petrified waiters stood holding in their spread hands petrified trays covered with petrified roasts, steaks, sandwiches, vegetables, fruits and pastry.

"A hammer, if you please, waiter," again rang out the imperious voice.

"Why what do you want of a hammer?" [illegible] his tongue at last.

"I want it," exclaimed the guest, with grim resolution written in every wrinkle of his rugged face, "to break up this powdered sugar!"—Chicago Tribune.

Forced to It.

Miss Emilia—My sister fell and broke her limb.

Old Mr. Jones—Which limb?

Miss Emilia (blushing)—Well, if I must tell you, it was her left walker.—Harper's Bazar.

A QUARTER OF A CENTURY AGO

There stood in Barnett county, Ohio, a good, hearty man, who is now Salem City, a man who has since become identified with the interests and development of that country. This man is no other than Mr. John Stewart, one of the wealthiest and most influential citizens in the county. In a recent letter he says: "I had been suffering from pains in my back and general kidney complaint for some time, and had used many remedies without any but a temporary relief. The pains in my back had become so severe that I was prevented from attending to my work, and could not move about without the use of a cane. Hearing, through a friend, of the wonderful cures effected by Oregon Kidney Tea I purchased a box, and from that very first dose I found instant relief, and before using half the contents of the box the pains in my back entirely disappeared. I have every faith in the virtues of the Oregon Kidney Tea, and can conscientiously recommend it to my friends. I would not be without it for anything."

Oregon Kidney Tea cures backache, incontinence of urine, brick dust deposit, burning or painful voiding while urinating, and all affections of the kidneys or urinary organs of either sex.

THE GAZETTE.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 24, 1891.

Mr. George H. Parsons returned yesterday morning from his trip to Chicago.

[illegible] of the season at the Cosmo [illegible] this evening.

Two young people of the M. E. church give a social at the residence of Mr. Geo. P. Vaux, on South Wahsatch avenue this evening.

The unterrified Democracy of El Paso county are preparing for a mass convention to be held in the court house next [illegible] day of 9 o'clock.

Workmen commenced yesterday tearing out the front of F. A. [illegible] & Son's store, preparatory to putting in a fine plate glass front.

THE GAZETTE has received a programme of a "Kirmiss" to be held in the De Remer opera house, Pueblo, during Sept. 28, 29, 30 and Oct. 1.

The Barker house in Manitou closes on Friday after breakfast. The Cliff as usual will keep open all winter and has better prospects this year than ever before.

Mr. F. Capell, the former partner of Mr. Frank Evans in the second hand business on Huerfano street, which has recently failed, has taken entire charge of the business again.

The ladies of the Salvation Army have adopted a new uniform, being white with blue sashes and ribbons. The "hose drill" in our dusty streets does not add much to its beauty.

The free reading room library has been increased by the munificent gift of seventy-three fine books from Mrs. D. N. Bean, formerly of this city, and who is now visiting Judge and Mrs. Campbell.

Mr. Ira M. Mallory, editor of the Herald, of Nunda, Ill., was a pleasant visitor at this office to-day, and expressed himself as being surprised to find an establishment like THE GAZETTE in the west.

Mr. W. R. Barnes has resigned his position as secretary of the school board. His term would have expired a year from next May and the board will appoint a successor until the next school election.

All interested in the study of the Sunday school lessons are invited to attend the Union Bible class taught by Rev. H. H. Belk, held at the rooms of the Y. M. C. A. every Thursday evening at 8 o'clock.

Dr. Strickler, assisted by Dr. Hadfield, Dr. Christopher, Dr. Estello and Dr. Robinson performed a difficult operation upon Mr. S. A. Jackson, the father of Sheriff Jackson, yesterday morning. The operation was successful and may save the patient's life. He is quite old, however, and is rallying slowly.

Mr. Geo. L. Marsh of the Chicago police department, and son of Chief Inspector Marsh, is in the city, accompanied by his wife. In company with Marshal Dunn and wife they will visit Leadville, Aspen and Glenwood Springs, and possibly remain in this vicinity during the month of October.

The first large consignment of Concord grapes reached this city yesterday and the usual war was precipitated by the South Tejon street dealers. Helm & Kopf collected a large crowd by selling five baskets for one dollar and they have telegraphed for another carload to continue the fun. Grapes will almost be given away now for a few days.

The Denver and Rio Grande has made a rate of $20 from Colorado Springs to Salt Lake or Ogden, good going by the D. & R. G. and returning via either the Union Pacific or the Colorado Midland. Tickets to be sold for morning and evening trains of Sept. 29 and limited for the going trip one day from sale. Final limit Oct. 13, stop overs allowed returning.

Last night the Hungarian orchestra of Broadmoor gave the last concert of the season in the Casino hall. But a small attendance gathered to hear the last of these concerts, which have been such a great attraction through the summer, and their faces were not of the brightest as they realized that the Hungarian orchestra was going away. The music was very finely rendered and received much applause.

Mr. W. J. Foster has already placed on exhibition a few of the specimens to be in the exhibit, "Colorado on Wheels." If the Centennial State band can secure money enough to make the trip it will accompany the exhibit and will go through the streets of each town visited to give the population notice that "Colorado on Wheels" has arrived. The members are at present endeavoring to raise the money for the trip by subscription from the business men.

The marriage of Miss Martha S. Moore, of Barnesville, O., to Mr. Charles Menkemeller, of Wheeling, W. Va., took place yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of the bride's sister, Miss Sue W. Moore, corner of Weber and Williamette. The ceremony was performed by Rev. James B. Gregg, of the First Congregational church. The happy couple left the same evening on the Rock Island for Wheeling, W. Va., their future home.

Manager Nye announces as the next attraction at the opera house W. S. Cleveland's new consolidated minstrels. This will be by far the most important minstrel company to be seen at the opera house this year. Everything is new and bright this season, not a vestige of the old show remaining. Mr. Cleveland's idea being to make his shows larger and better with each succeeding year, he decided to put more money and better talent in his "Big City Show," and devote his time to making this company the greatest minstrel enterprise ever organized. The company numbers over fifty performers, each and every member carefully selected personally by Mr. Cleveland, which is a guarantee of excellence. The comedians are all clever, and the singers are pronounced by all critics to be the best ever heard outside of grand opera.

Some of the people from this city who attended the Monument potato bake on Tuesday, are telling an amusing story of how a raw country youth succeeded in outwitting one of the ring and came fairly. The latter had a stand of canes which he gave to those who were fortunate enough to throw small iron rings over their heads. In the middle of the board was a cane with a $5 bill attached and this drew a great deal of patronage. It is almost impossible to "ring" a cane and the fakir was doing a rich harvest until a rural "Napoleon of finance" came along. He took in the situation and then got his younger brother to creep in behind the stand. Then when the fakir's head was turned from the stand the older boy would throw a ring, the urchin would bob up, catch it and put it over the cane. He worked this little scheme twice before the owner of the stand discovered the trouble, and got $10 for his ingenuity.

West Side Citizens Meet.

The citizens of the west side held a mass meeting on Tuesday evening and after about twenty-five speeches they adopted resolutions calling on the city council to compel the Rapid Transit company to comply with the ordinance and plank their tracks on Colorado avenue; calling attention to the damage done to the trees by the linemen of the electric light and railway companies; asking for the grading of Colorado avenue and other streets; the acquiring of land and the making of a city park along the Monument; asking for the construction of sluice boxes big enough to carry off the water from violent storms, and that the leaks in the water mains, which are owned by the West Colorado Springs company, and not by the city, be repaired. A mass meeting was called for next Tuesday evening to consider school matters.

The Yacht Races.

The miniature yacht races on Prospect lake are beginning to attract a great deal of attention and if the interest keeps up, a miniature yacht club will be found to formulate rules, calculate time allowances, etc. No formal races have as yet been held, but on Saturday afternoon if the wind is not too strong, the Gloriana, Holy Moses and Katydid all sloop yachts, will try conclusions. These boats carry comparatively as much sail as a big racing boat and the races are therefore very pretty. The boats will be placed on exhibition in some down-town window to-morrow, so the public may have a chance of judging their merits before the races.

Among the new boats which are on the blocks and will soon be launched are the Thistle and the G. Whiz, both sloops, and the Atalanta, a 40-inch schooner. Two other boats are being planned, and some gentlemen whose constructive ability is not equal to building a sail boat, are talking of sending back to expert professional boat builders near the salt water.

In certain quarters the talk is becoming so nautical that those who have never seen other craft than the "prairie" or the Colorado City "schooner" are as bewildered as they might be in a foreign land.

Trades Assembly Meeting.

There will be a special meeting of the Colorado Springs Trades and Labor Assembly at their hall on Friday evening, September 25, at 7:30 o'clock. Business of importance.

A NARROW ESCAPE IN RUSSIA.

How the Vigilant Officers of the Czar Were Cleverly Outwitted.

On the second day after our arrival in Krasnoyarsk we narrowly escaped getting into what might have been serious trouble as the result of an unexpected perquisition in the house of the acquaintances with whom Shamarin and Peterson were staying. This acquaintance, it seemed, was under suspicion, and late in the evening, during the absence of the two young men from their quarters, the police suddenly appeared with orders to make a house search. The search was duly made, but nothing of a suspicious nature was found except the two locked trunks of Shamarin and Peterson.

In reply to a question as to what was in them the proprietor of the house said that he did not know, that they were the property of two of his acquaintances who had stopped for a few days with him on their way from Irkutsk to St. Petersburg. Upon being asked where these acquaintances were, he replied that he did not know; that they usually went out after dinner and returned between 11 and 12 o'clock. After a brief consultation the police officers decided that as they had no orders to search the personal baggage of the housewarmer's guests they would not force the locks of the trunks, but would merely cord and seal them, so that the contents could not be tampered with, and leave them until morning.

When Shamarin and Peterson returned to their quarters about midnight they found their trunks corded and sealed so that they could not be opened. In one of them were many letters from political exiles and convicts in eastern Siberia and friends and relatives in European Russia—letters describing my investigations and the nature of the material that I was collecting, and asking the friends and relatives in Euro; an Russia to co-operate with me—and a photograph of myself that I had given to Shamarin with a dedication or inscription on the back that would reveal to any intelligent police officer the intimate nature of my relations with political convicts.

What was to be done? To break a police seal under such circumstances would be a penal offense, and would probably lead to imprisonment and an investigation. To leave the letters and photograph in the trunk would be to insure their discovery and confiscation on the following morning, and that might create a very embarrassing situation for me, as well as for the authors of the letters and their friends. The two young men finally concluded to make an attempt to get the trunk open without removing the cords or breaking the seals, and as the letters and photograph were near the bottom, and as the lid could not be raised even if the trunk were unlocked, they decided to take out a part of the bottom and afterward replace it.

By working all the rest of the night they succeeded in getting out one of the bottom boards, obtained the dangerous letters and the photograph, but the board back without disturbing any of the seals, and when the police came in the morning found everything undisturbed, and saw the trunks searched. Of course nothing more dangerous than a hairbrush and nothing more incriminating than a hotel bill could be found.—George Kennan in Century.
